SYNOPSIS

When the boss of Richpickle Ranch goes on the war path, everybody has to run for cover. No matter what the family or hired hands do to soothe him, Mr. Richpickle kicks up like a wild mustang. But Bonny, his daughter, knows of an Indian Spirit who specializes in taming such men as her father and she sends out a call for assistance. The Indians come to the rescue and decide that all Mr. Richpickle needs is a good look at himself. If he can be made to see himself as others see him, they believe he will want to mend his ways. And so they arrange for the bad-tempered father to have a glimpse of himself. This is done and the father is anything but pleased with what he sees. What does he do after that? Well, just about everything Bonny wanted in the first place.
