CAMPUS TO STATE HOUSE

The 1976 elections in the Danbury area were highlighted for the WestConn community by the entry of state college trustee Jim Dyer into the 110th State Assembly District race. Dyer attracted a large turnout of college volunteers — something that no other post-Watergate politician was able to do — and he swept to victory on election day running ahead of Senator Lowell Wieker and Congressman Ron Sarasin, and even Jimmy Carter.

Dyer's coalition of college volunteers and elderly residents proved to be a formidable mixture for his Republican opponent, and on election night state representative-elect Jimmy Dyer had much praise for his "Kiddy Corp" of WestConn students. "Anything that I am, and anything that I'm going to be started at WestConn," said Dyer, "and I am very grateful for the tremendous help that I received from so many friends."

PROTEST!

FOR THOSE WHO MISSED THE PROTEST MOVEMENT . . .

In case you missed the mid-sixties and early seventies WestConn staged a re-run of those spirited protest days. "Ban the Bomb," "Stop the War," and other famous protest slogans were seen marching around the campus, however, just as in the real protest days, most WestConn students remained apathetic.
