1973 Official Inaugural Events

RECEPTION FOR THE VICE PRESIDENT AND MRS. AGNEW

A special reception honoring the Vice President and Mrs. Spiro T. Agnew will initiate the Inaugural festivities. This gala event will take place at the Smithsonian Museum of History and Technology on Thursday, January 18, between 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Refreshments will be served. By special invitation only.

SALUTE TO THE STATES

Paying tribute to the states and their governors, this exciting new Inaugural event will be held on Thursday evening, January 18, at 9 p.m. A two-and-a-half hour star-studded variety show headed by Bob Hope and featuring the top names in the performing arts will entertain guests in the Opera Hall and in the Concert Hall of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. By special invitation only.

SALUTE TO AMERICA'S HERITAGE

To be held for the first time this year, this 2 p.m.-6 p.m. party on Friday, January 19, will honor the contributions of America's ethnic groups to our cultural life. The informal, festive air of a neighborhood block party will prevail as the music, art, and food of a broad cross-section of American life are featured. Celebrity co-hosts will mingle informally with the guests. The site of the party will be the Corcoran Gallery of Art, west of the Ellipse. By special invitation only.

VETERANS' COMMITTEE

This liaison committee coordinates participation by America's war veterans in Inaugural events. Congressional Medal of Honor winners are among distinguished guests at the ceremonies; hundreds of hospitalized veterans from the Washington area will view the Parade.

STATE SOCIETIES

The State Societies' functions held in conjunction with the 1973 Inaugural are listed with the Information Center at the Inaugural Committee (447-9150).

MEDICAL COMMITTEE

The Medical Committee has set up a Command Post at 1875 Connecticut Avenue, Room 840-B (629-2104, 629-2106), to serve individuals who need medical and health assistance. Medical aid rooms are conveniently near special events; warming tents, first aid stations, and comfort stations are along the Parade route. Horse ambulances, veterinarians, and technicians will be in the horse assembly area.

OATH OF OFFICE

I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the Office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States.

—Article II, Section 1 of the Constitution of the United States

INAUGURATION CEREMONY

The solemn moment when the President and Vice President assume office begins at 11:30 a.m. on Saturday, January 20.

Members of Congress, Supreme Court Justices, Cabinet Officers and Governors join Congressional Medal of Honor winners, military leaders, the diplomatic corps and thousands of invited citizens to witness this historic ceremony.

Once held in March, the oath of office is now administered on January 20 at noon on the East steps. Richard Nixon is the twenty-sixth President to be sworn in outside on the Capitol steps. Vice Presidents, who formerly took the oath of office in the Senate Chamber, have been inaugurated with the President since 1937.

After the oath of office has been administered to the President and Vice President, President Richard Nixon will deliver the traditional Inaugural Address.

INAUGURAL CONCERTS

An evening of distinguished music has been an Inaugural highlight since the first President took office. For the first time this year, there will be three concerts which will take place in the three halls within the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts on Friday evening, January 19. By special invitation only.

AMERICAN MUSIC CONCERT, at 7:30 p.m. in the Opera House, features some of the country's finest entertainers in concert format.

YOUTH CONCERT, at 8:30 p.m. in the Eisenhower Theatre, presents top musicians whose primary appeal is to the young.

SYMPHONIC CONCERT, at 9:00 p.m. in the Concert Hall, presents Van Cliburn and the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy.

CANDLELIGHT DINNERS

Those purchasing box or front orchestra seats to either the Symphonic Concert or the American Music Concert will receive invitations to attend one of two "candlelight dinners". Complementing the theme of historical American music, the Roof Terrace of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts will suggest a colonial Williamsburg setting complete with a menu of that period.

For those attending the Symphonic Concert, dinner will begin with cocktails at 6:00 P.M., Friday evening. Those attending the American Music Concert will attend the dinner immediately following that concert.

Termines, and Members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives will attend the Ball at specific locations. These distinguished guests, as well as all other guests, will not move from site to site.

Complimentary bus service will be provided from major hotels and commuter lots to the Ball sites, with schedules posted at the hotels.

All Ball tickets will be color-coded to designate the specific location where they are valid. Admission is by ticket only. Tickets are $40 each which includes a complimentary hard-bound copy of the Inaugural Program.

Those persons who have received invitations to the Ball, but who have not submitted their checks, please see Ticket Will Call procedure, on page 19.

A new feature this year will be a Youth Inaugural Ball, with music and decorations geared to the tastes of young people between the ages of 18 and 30. It will be held at 9:00, on Saturday evening, January 20th. Admission is $15 to this black-tie event. By special invitation only.

WORSHIP SERVICE

A worship service in the East Room of the White House on Sunday, January 21st, at 11:30 a.m. will conclude the official Inaugural program of events. By special invitation only.

INAUGURAL PARADE

Floats, bands, marching units, precision drill teams, and dignitaries pass in review before the newly inaugurated President of the United States; the Inaugural Parade is America on the march. This unique national pageant unfolds on Saturday, January 30, at 1:15 p.m.

The theme of the 1973 Inaugural Parade is "the Spirit of '76" as it is reflected in the country today. Floats from the states and other sources depict historical events and themes of present and future American commitments. There will be music and entertainment along the parade route prior to the parade.

The parade has been shortened to less than two hours so that it will be over long before dark.

Tickets for reserved seats are priced at $5, $20, $25, and $50. For children twelve and under, the $5 tickets are available for only $2.

Reserved tickets may be purchased at key locations throughout the City, including Hospitality Booths (see page 32) in many hotels.

INAUGURAL BALL

Thousands of guests will celebrate at several locations throughout the City, including the Smithsonian's Museum of History and Technology, Museum of Natural History, John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, and the Pension Office Building.

Members of the Cabinet, the Justices of the Supreme Court, Ambassadors, Chiefs of Mission, the Governors of the States and

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The Resonant Invitation to the Inaugural conveys a sincere wish that you will be in Washington for the occasion, but the invitation itself does not admit you to any of the Inaugural events.

Admission tickets are required. Individual invitations are necessary to purchase tickets to some of the festivities. Ticket orders are processed on a first-come, first-served basis until the capacity of each event is reached.

TICKETS

Persons who have received special invitations to official events but who have not yet submitted their checks may telephone Ticket Will Call (393-2500), in the Commerce Building, to learn whether tickets are still available.

Ticket orders for both special-invitation events and the Parade (see p. 14) not received by January 8 must be collected at the Will Call Desk, in the Great Hall of the Commerce Department, Entrance No. 16, 14th & E Sts., N.W., January 12 through 20, between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m.

If you are unable to pick up your tickets in person, your representative must show proper identification, which should include a signed note of authorization on your letterhead.

There will be shuttle service available from some hotels to the Commerce Building. Please check at your hotel for specific times for this service.

TRANSPORTATION

Transportation during the Inaugural celebration presents problems due to the presence of many visitors and the blocking of major streets during the Parade. Building of the Metro—the D. C. subway system—compounds these difficulties. Please allow ample time to reach your destination and wherever possible avail yourself of the free shuttle between many hotels and official Inaugural events. Check with a Hospitality Booth to learn what special bus service may be useful to you (see p. 33).

THE OFFICIAL 1973 INAUGURAL MEDAL AND 1973 INAUGURAL PLATE

The official 1973 Inaugural Medal sculpted by Gilroy Roberts is offered in sterling silver (2½" diameter) and in solid bronze (2½" diameter) with a desk stand to permit display.

Both the silver and bronze medals are issued in two versions. The traditional edition with a softly-toned matte finish is not limited in quantity. A special edition of proof-quality medals with a mirror-like finish, offered for the first time, are issued in very limited quantities. There is a limit of one silver proof and/or one bronze proof per order. The total edition of proofs is further limited to the exact number of orders postmarked by January 31, 1973. Each of the proofs is serially numbered as well as individually hallmarked.

For the first time, a sterling silver Official Inaugural Plate is offered, showing the new Roberts portraits of President Nixon and Vice President Agnew. The reverse side of the plate is similar to the reverse side of the medal, bearing the Presidential Seal. Each plate, 8" in diameter, is proof-quality, individually hallmarked, serially numbered and packaged in a library case. There is a limit of one plate per order and the total number produced will be limited to the exact number ordered by January 31, 1973.

These commemorative items may be ordered from the Inaugural Committee, P. O. Box 1600, Washington, D. C. 20013; proceeds help defray Inaugural expenses. Checks should be payable to "Inaugural Medals". Add sales tax where applicable.

Items limited to one per order:

Proof-quality Sterling Silver Inaugural Plate	$150.00
Proof-quality Sterling Silver Inaugural Medal	$ 50.00
Proof-quality Solid Bronze Inaugural Medal	$ 10.00

Items not limited in quantity:

City in 1789 to honor President Washington. Washington attended this elegant fete, given by the New York Dancing Assembly, without Mrs. Washington, who had not yet arrived in the City. The first ball to be planned and held as part of the official Inaugural ceremonies honored James Madison in 1809. Held in Long's Hotel in Washington, it was attended by both the Madisons and outgoing President Jefferson. Invited guests paid $4.00 to attend. By the middle of the 19th Century, Inaugural balls had become a favorite tradition. They took place at such Washington hotels as Long's, Davis', the Indian Queen, and Carusi's. Sometimes, two balls were held: one general Inaugural ball and another for the party faithful. When crowds grew too large for the hotels, balls were held in temporary structures erected at Judiciary Square and in such large Government buildings as the Patent Office, the Treasury Building, and the Smithsonian's Arts and Industries Building. From 1885 until 1901 the Inaugural balls were held in the Pension Office Building, where the huge columns lent themselves to elaborate decorations. Spacious rooms allowed for dining and dancing.

Woodrow Wilson felt that the festive air of a ball jarred the solemnity of an Inauguration and thus began an era of no official Inaugural balls, though private parties and charity dances were held during the Nineteen Twenties. The next official Inaugural ball honored Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1933. Because of the Depression and the Second World War, none were held until Harry S. Truman revived the balls in 1949. Today, the Inaugural Ball is in the grand tradition of the 19th Century, with dancing and entertainment at several sites within the city. 1973 marks the first time young people have honored a President with their own ball.

Some form of committee has always been necessary to organize the activities of the Inauguration. Two types of activities are

With Inaugurations, the Constitutional and the festive; thus there have usually been two groups to carry out arrangements. The Congress of the United States is charged with the official segment of the Inauguration, the swearing-in ceremonies for the President and Vice President at the Capitol. In 1799, a joint Congressional committee handled the procedures for the administration of the Oath to General Washington. From the second Inauguration until 1901, a Senate committee of arrangements assumed control of the formal ceremonies. From 1901 to the present, a joint Congressional Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies composed of members of the Senate and House of Representatives has had the responsibility for the formal swearing-in ceremonies.

Festive plans for inaugural celebrations have been carried out traditionally by groups of private citizens; thus evolved the Inaugural Committee. For Washington's first Inauguration, citizens of New York City arranged for the activities of celebration. In the ensuing years leading citizens of the District of Columbia, public officials, and members of the victorious political party have formed Inaugural committees to handle arrangements. Toward the latter part of the 19th Century, Inaugural activities became so large that the committee organized various subcommittees to ensure the smooth handling of the arrangements.

Today a bi-partisan pre-Inaugural Committee is selected in mid-year prior to the general election to make preliminary plans for parade routes and grandstands and to arrange for office facilities. Two executive directors, one from each party, are chosen at this time, plus representatives from each party, from the District of Columbia, the military and the General Services Administration. After the election, the President-Elect appoints a chairman of the Inaugural Committee and more specific plans are laid. Inaugural Committees today are assisted—as they were in Washington's time—by the Federal Government, the Government of the District of Columbia and by many volunteers. The Chairman of the 1973 Inaugural Committee is J. Willard Mason, who also served in that capacity in 1969.

a Vice President has succeeded to office upon the death of a President. Following the death of President Warren G. Harding in August, 1923, Vice President Calvin Coolidge, visiting his boyhood home at Plymouth Notch, Vermont, was sworn in by his father Colonel John C. Coolidge, a notary public.

George Washington delivered the first Inaugural Address. In the early years of the Republic, printed copies of the Inaugural address were prized souvenirs. Today a time-honored tradition, the speech can be seen and heard throughout the world as it is delivered.

Indecision over which House of Congress should administer the Presidential oath of office resulted in the first outdoor inaugural on Capitol Hill in 1817. Twelve years later Andrew Jackson brought the ceremony to a restored Capitol and one of America's great pageants was established.

What are known today as Inaugural parades began as military and citizen escorts to lead the new President to the Capitol and then to the White House. These early parades were a courtesy rather than a part of the scheduled Inaugural ceremony. In William Henry Harrison's time political clubs and marching societies joined in. Gradually, military groups, marching bands, and floats were added. Today the size and popularity of the parade makes it one of the Inauguration's main events, seen and enjoyed by citizens who come to Washington and by millions who view it on television.

President Washington's first Inauguration in New York City ended with a spectacular illumination and so did Thomas Jefferson's: the first Inaugural to be held in the City of Washington. A great torchlight procession and fireworks display marked the Rutherford B. Hayes Inauguration in 1877. For excitement and pageantry, the Inaugural ball is a highlight of the celebration. The first ball, though not official, was held in New York

SOME INAUGURAL HISTORY

In America a new people had risen up without King, or prince, or nobles, knowing nothing of tithes and little of landlords, the plough being for the most part in the hands of free holders of the soil. They were more sincerely religious, better educated, of serener minds, and of purer morals than the men of any former republic. By calm meditation and friendly councils they had prepared a constitution which, in the union of freedom with strength and order, excelled every one known before, and which secured itself against violence and revolution by providing a peaceful method for every needed reform. In the happy morning of their existence as one of the powers of the world, they had chosen justice for their guide, and while they proceeded on their way with well-founded confidence and joy, all the friends of mankind invoked success on the unexampled endeavor to govern states and territories of imperial extent as one federal republic.

This is the concluding paragraph of the six-volume History of the United States written in 1885 by George Bancroft, who was Polk's Secretary of the Navy and who lived on Lafayette Square.

The Inauguration of the President of the United States is a solemn ritual in which a simple 35-word oath of office elevates a citizen to awesome power and responsibility. It is an achievement of peaceful transition and continuity through change, the climax of a process whereby a free people select one of themselves to be their Chief Magistrate for the next four years.

The only Inaugural Act prescribed by the Constitution is the taking of the oath. Attendant events celebrate the assumption of office and pay tribute to the new President, and from these the present inaugural tradition has evolved. Usually the oath is administered by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, notable exceptions having occurred when

With Inaugurations, the Constitutional and the festive; thus there have usually been two groups to carry out arrangements. The Congress of the United States is charged with the official segment of the Inauguration, the swearing-in ceremonies for the President and Vice President at the Capitol. In 1789, a joint Congressional committee handled the procedures for the administration of the Oath to General Washington. From the second Inauguration until 1901, a Senate committee of arrangements assumed control of the formal ceremonies. From 1901 to the present, a Joint Congressional Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies composed of members of the Senate and House of Representatives has had the responsibility for the formal swearing-in ceremonies.

Festive plans for inaugural celebrations have been carried out traditionally by groups of private citizens; thus evolved the Inaugural Committee. For Washington's first Inauguration, citizens of New York City arranged for the activities of celebration. In the ensuing years leading citizens of the District of Columbia, public officials, and members of the victorious political party have formed Inaugural committees to handle arrangements. Toward the latter part of the 19th Century, Inaugural activities became so large that the committee organized various subcommittees to ensure the smooth handling of the arrangements.

City in 1789 to honor President Washington. Washington attended this elegant fete, given by the New York Dancing Assembly, without Mrs. Washington, who had not yet arrived in the City. The first ball to be planned and held as part of the official Inaugural ceremonies honored James Madison in 1809. Held in Long's Hotel in Washington, it was attended by both the Madisons and outgoing President Jefferson. Invited guests paid $4.00 to attend. By the middle of the 19th Century, Inaugural balls had become a favorite tradition. They took place at such Washington hotels as Long's, Davis', the Indian Queen, and Caruso's. Sometimes, two balls were held: one general Inaugural ball and another for the party faithful. When crowds grew too large for the hotels, balls were held in temporary structures erected at Judiciary Square and in such large Government buildings as the Patent Office, the Treasury Building, and the Smithsonian's Arts and Industries Building. From 1883 until 1901 the Inaugural balls were held in the Pension Office Building, where the huge columns lent themselves to elaborate decorations. Spacious rooms allowed for dining and dancing.

Woodrow Wilson felt that the festive air of a ball jarred the solemnity of an Inauguration and thus began an era of no official Inaugural balls, though private parties and charity dances were held during the Nineteen Twenties. The next official Inaugural ball honored Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1933. Because of the Depression and the Second World War, none were held until Harry S. Truman revived the balls in 1949. Today, the Inaugural Ball is in the grand tradition of the 19th Century, with dancing and entertainment at several sites within the city. 1973 marks the first time young people have honored a President with their own ball.

Some form of committee has always been necessary to organize the activities of the Inauguration. Two types of activities are
